

The story begins with Arin's journey into the remote highlands, where he aims to photograph the mysterious mountain.

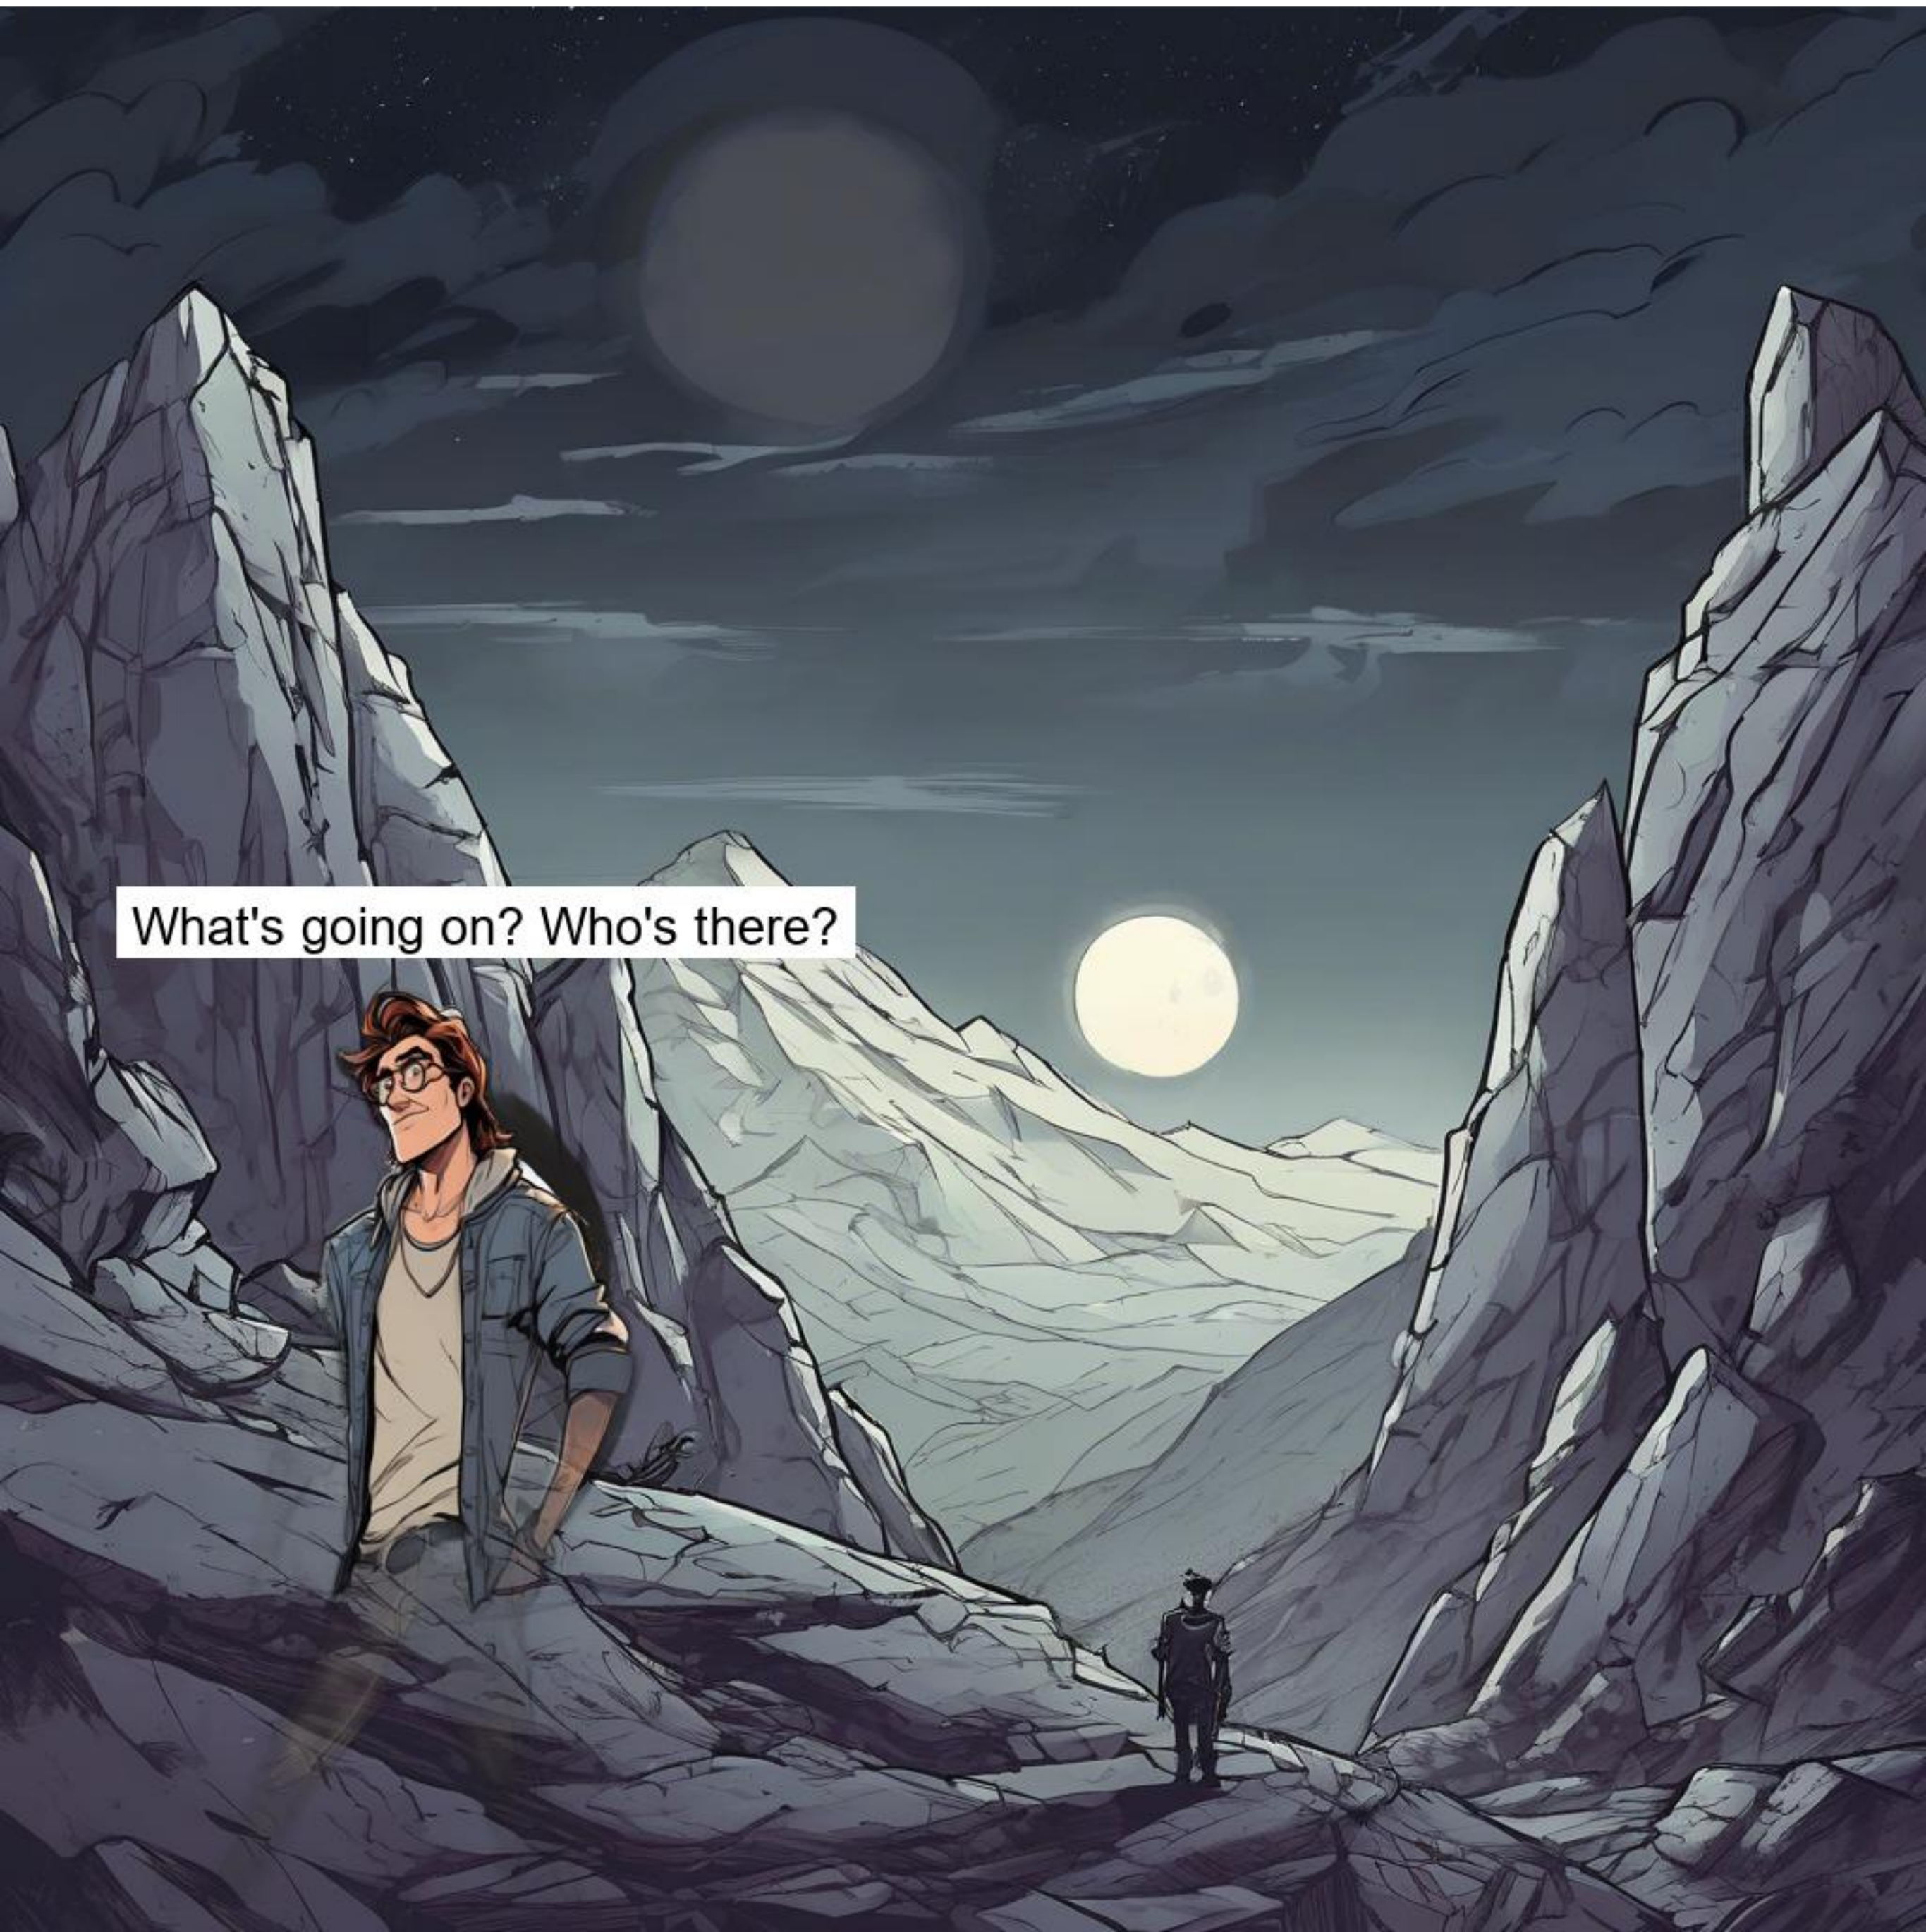

As Arin climbs higher, the atmosphere becomes increasingly ominous, hinting at the strange occurrences that will follow.

At night, the mountain takes on an eerie quality, and Arin starts to experience the strange echoes that will challenge his perceptions.

What's going on? Who's there?

As the echoes intensify, time becomes distorted, and Arin's sense of reality begins to blur.

In the final ascent, Arin must confront the ultimate question: is he seeking to capture the mountain, or will it capture him?

I'm sorry

The story reaches its climax as Arin faces the truth about himself and the mountain's mysterious power.

I think I've been trying to capture the wrong thing all along...